A STORY NO ONE WRITES

Gillette Audio — Nando the Scribe — gillettenarrative.com

Science should not be considered only in times of need, and not only Her, because it always remains a matter of style and personality within what we are, it is the evidence of an education we know we have.

Hold on tight because now you will read what no one has ever had the courage to write, it is only a matter of character.

The first human being in history was a woman, the only true perfect base and single platform that generated everything we are.

She lived about 300 thousand years before man arrived, and this makes us understand how autonomous, independent, strong in character she was, and above all cerebral, cognitive, with no need to share her intimate part with others — in a few words, she never needed sex.

But we will not do anthropology here, I have no academic or school credentials, only 8 years of schooling and a 4 in Italian, because this story only wants to highlight two fundamental things.

The birth of production and of sales, and it all began with a woman, this is absolutely certain, and perhaps it will also end with a woman, this will simply be her gift when she decides to give it.

Good reading
